Severe Weather Outlook Saturday, November 05, 2016

Hazardous Weather

Plenty of moisture, along with instability, will persist across much of the Borderland. Severe storms are again possible, though mainly east of the Rio Grande Valley. A few of these storms could produce hail of 1 to 2 inches, heavy rainfall of up to 2 inches, and gusty winds to 50 mph. An upper low will lift toward the four corner region, allowing some dry air to get into southwest New Mexico, for clearing skies. Temperatures will remain near or slightly above normal.

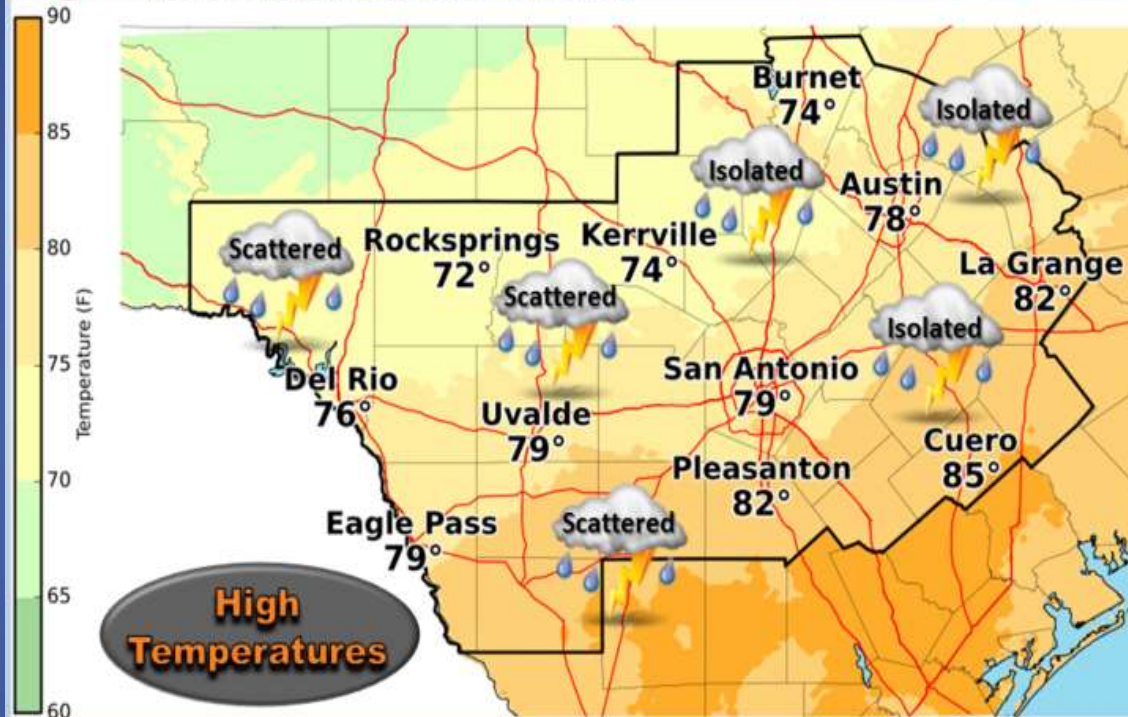

There will be a chance of showers and thunderstorms today, some of which could be severe along and west of the Pecos River. Hail, strong winds, locally heavy rainfall and frequent lightning strikes will accompany the stronger storms. Otherwise, temperatures will be seasonally cool.

Hazardous Weather

Mild with Showers & Thunderstorms

National Weather Service Austin / San Antonio

@NWSSanAntonio
weather.gov/ewx

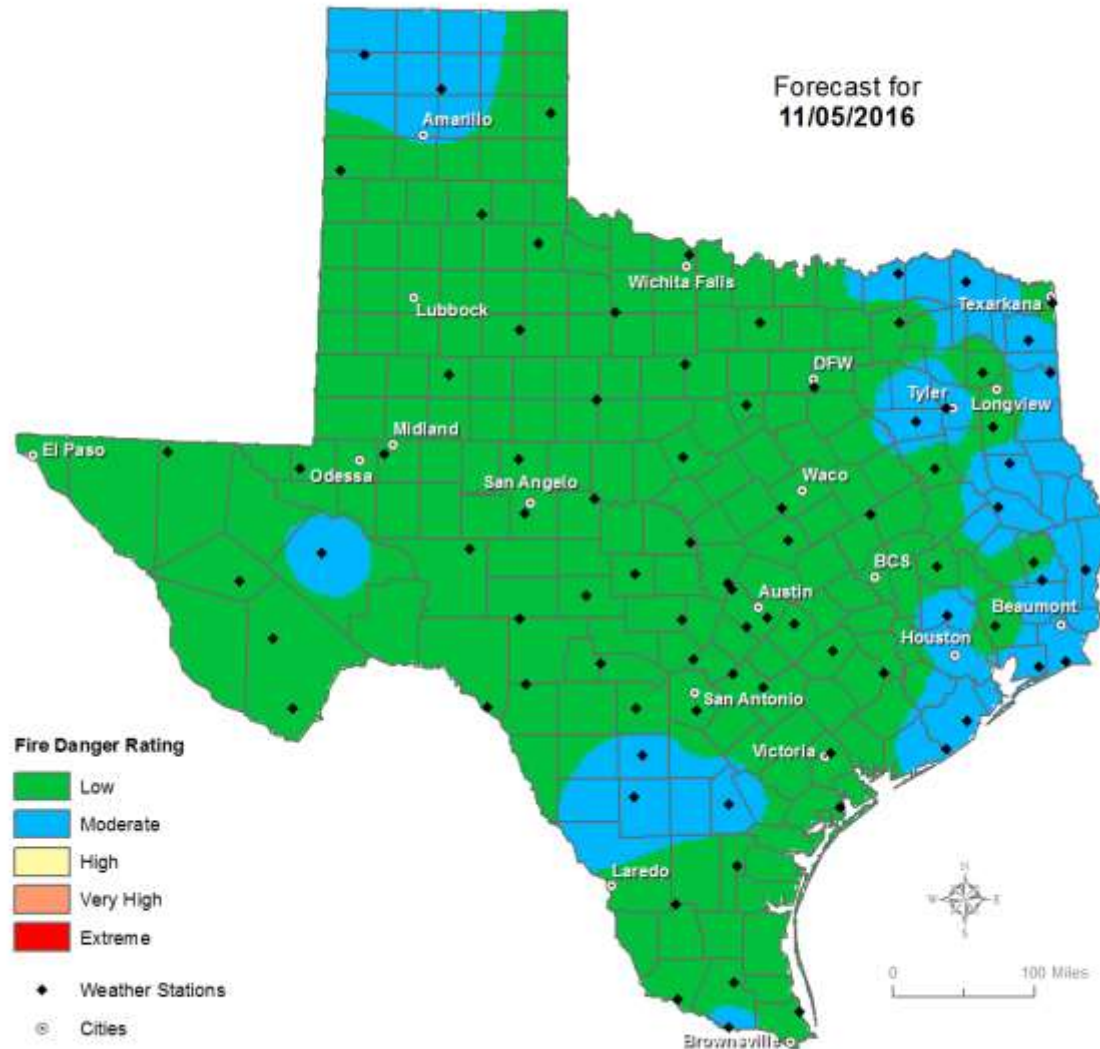

Scattered showers and thunderstorms with locally heavy downpours are expected across the Rio Grande Plains and Edwards Plateau. Showers and thunderstorms will become more isolated further to the east. Temperatures will be within 2 degrees of normal, with highs ranging from the lower 70s in the Hill Country to the mid 80s near the Coastal Plains.
